Abstract

William S. Willis Jr. (1921-1983), anthropologist and ethnohistorian, contributed significantly to the understanding of the dynamics of inter-cultural exchange in a multicultural context. After receiving his doctorate from Columbia University, he was hired as the first African American professor of Anthropology at Southern Methodist University. Upon resigning in protest from SMU in 1972, he returned to teach at Columbia University until 1975. His final years were spent studying Boasian anthropology. The collection includes correspondence, lecture notes, manuscripts of Willis' writings, and working notes. Of note, are the memos concerning his leaving Southern Methodist University and his extensive research notes on Franz Boas' views on race relations in America.

Background note

William Shedrick Willis, Jr. (1921-1983) was an anthropologist and ethnohistorian. Shortly after his birth in Waco, Texas, the Willis family moved to Dallas where William graduated from Booker T. Washington High School. He continued his education at Howard University, graduating cum laude (A.B., 1942), and at Columbia University, where he received a Ph.D. in anthropology in 1955. William married Georgina Upshur, who also attended Columbia University (M.S., 1946), in 1949.

Willis' early works addressed the subject of Indian-Black relations in Southeastern North America. His published works on this subject include Colonial Conflict and the Cherokee Indians, 1710-1760 (1955), The Nation of Bread (1957), Patrilineal Institutions in Southeastern North America (1963), and Divide and Rule: Red, White, and Black in the Southeast (1963).

After many years in New York City, the Willis' returned to Dallas in 1964. Here William accepted a joint teaching position in the Division of Social Sciences at Bishop College and in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Southern Methodist University. William Willis was the first Black scholar to be appointed to the faculty of Southern Methodist University.

It was during his tenure at SMU that Willis turned his attention to the study of Blacks in anthropology. In fact, Willis was instrumental in helping to establish the African American Studies Program at SMU. This new direction prompted Willis to re-evaluate the contribution of Franz Boas in relation to Blacks and the development of anthropology in the United States. Willis' works on these subjects include Anthropology and Negroes on the Southern Colonial Frontier (1970), and Skeletons in the Anthropological Closet (1972).

Willis resigned from SMU in 1972 in protest against the racist treatment he received from the faculty within the Department of Anthropology. He continued teaching at Columbia University during summer sessions until 1975. It was after his resignation from SMU that Willis began extensive research and writing on Franz Boas. The Willis' returned to Philadelphia (Georgine Willis' hometown) in 1978 where William was able to utilize the collections at the American Philosophical Society Library. Works during this period include Franz Boas and the Study of Black Folklore (1973), and Dubious Boasiana (1983).

William Willis suffered a fatal heart attack on 8 August 1983. He had begun writing a treatise entitled Boas Goes to Atlanta, which focused in Boas' commencement address at the 11th Atlanta University Conference on Negro Problems and its significance to Boas and the development of anthropology in the United States.

Willis was a fellow of the American Anthropological Association and the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and was an active member of the American Society for Ethnohistory, the Society for American Archaeology, and the American Association of University Professors.

Scope & content

The papers reflect Dr. Willis' passionate commitment to the field of anthropology and his significant contribution to the understanding of the dynamics of inter-cultural exchange in a multicultural context. With his study of Cherokee Indians; Southern Blacks and Native Americans; and Boasian anthropology, he extended the concept of cultural conditioning. His professional correspondence present his thoughts on the conflicts within the anthropological discipline; plus memos of the treatment he received as the first African American professor hired by Southern Methodist University. Lecture notes include classes taught at Southern Methodist University (1964-1972) and Columbia University (1972-1975). Of particular note are the extensive research notes on Franz Boas' attempts to deal with the race issue in America and his preservation of Black folklore.

The papers (26 boxes; 13 linear feet) are divided into four series:

Series I. Correspondence 1945-1983 3.5 linear feet Series II. Lecture and Research notes 1945-1983 8 linear feet Series III. Works 1955-1983 1 linear foot Series IV. Photographs and Ephemera 1942-1984 0.5 linear feet

Other Descriptive Information

In addition to providing insight into the life of an African American scholar during the civil rights era, this collection may afford students of African American history useful information in a number of areas of interest.

Of special note are the lecture materials on the courses Willis taught in anthropology, history of anthropology, and African American studies, while at SMU and at summer sessions at Columbia University during the 1960s-1970s.
